WHY IS THE RESHUFFLE OF FRENCH GOVERNMENT TAKES SO LONG THAN EXPECTED

SINCE RESIGNATION OF COLLOMB A WEEK AGO

Paris, Washington DC, 09.10.2018, 23:16 Time

USPA NEWS - While the reshuffle is long overdue, it appears that the final list of ministers is not yet over ?

Is the reshuffle the best solution to be profoundly revised for the Philippe's II government. Why is the reshuffle taking so longer than expected, as the opposition is getting too impatient, one week after the resignation of Interior Minister Gerard Collomb ? One of the assumptions is that the list of government members would not be complete yet, hence it is growing in magnitude at the impatience of the opposition. Reportedly, Emmanuel Macron and Edward Philippe would have faced at least five candidates who declined the offer to join the government, including the Ministries of Interior and Culture.

While the reshuffle is long overdue, it appears that the final list of ministers is not yet over. Is the reshuffle the best solution to be profoundly revised for the Philippe's II government ? Why is the reshuffle taking so longer than expected , as the opposition is getting too impatient, one week after the resignation of Interior Minister Gerard Collomb.

One of the assumptions is that the list of government members would not be complete yet, hence it is growing in magnitude at the impatience of the opposition. Reportedly, Emmanuel Macron and Edward Philippe would have faced at least five candidates who declined the offer to join the government, including the Ministries of Interior and Culture.

This is precisely the difficulty for the couple at the head of the executive: find the most suitable profiles, while resources are lacking within the Macron's clan. With this redesign, Emmanuel Macron and Edward Philippe want to avoid repeating the casting mistakes that were costly with Nicolas Hulot and Gerard Collomb, the major state's ministries and resigned restively in the beginning of September, and end of the same month. Meanwhile, the minister of Sport, Laura Flessel, has also resigned";

THE POSITION OF MINISTER OF THSI GOVERNMENT DOESNT APPEALING AND SEXY ANYMORE

The position of Minister in the government of Édouard Philippe is no longer sexy? For some, this seems to be the case like Mathieu Klein. Former spokesman of Manuel Valls at the 2017 primary, who tweeted by explaining, announced how he declined the offer of a ministerial position in the government of Edouard Philippe.

EDOUARD PHILIPPE APPOINTED PRIME MINISTER OF THE NEW FRENCH GOVERNMENT

HE IS THE REPUBLICAN MAYOR OF HAVRE

On Twitter, Mathieu Klein wrote: "I will therefore not part of the next government I hope he succeeds in reducing poverty and continue to contribute to the functions that are mine, with such a mindset. demanding that constructive ".

The reshuffle, is delayed but falls as badly with the agenda of the President of Republic who will go tomorrow in Armenia for the opening of the 17th summit of the Francophonie. After this very tense and tumultuous week, since the Minister of the Interior who resigned a week ago. The choice of the next Minister of the Interior has a hard time satisfying both the political and the background. The rare gem is difficult to find in the current tense political context, as there are seven ministers who have resigned since the beginning of President Macron's term. The Prime Minister meanwhile, takes the increase of the popularity rating while the rating of President Macron it, fall more and more. "We will not compromise on the commitments of the President of the Republic and there is no feverishness," said Edward Philippe at the National Assembly responding to the leader of the Republican Party Christian Jacob.
