American Professional Surfer Robert Kelly Slater, is famous for his competitive prowess and style. He has been crowned ASP World Tour Champion a record 11 times, including 5 consecutive titles in 1994-1998. He played the recurring character Jimmy Slade around ten episodes of the popular TV show Baywatch in the early 1990s. He appeared in an episode of the reality show The Girls Next Doors, and has starred in many surf films during his career.

Kelly Slater is a fundraiser and spokesperson for Suicide Prevention awareness. He has surfed in celebrity events for Surfers Against Suicide, telling sports website "Athletes Talk": "I have lost a couple of friends myself to suicide and it's just a horrible thing that can be prevented. People get in this dark place and they don't know what to do so it's always nice to see a non-profit that isn't turning into anything else other than trying to help people."

Kelly Slater performed an incredible aerial maneuver that appears to be a luck recovery during the Hurley Pro at Trestles in California (standby September 09-20) on Men's Samsung Galaxy Championship Tour # 8. But as impressive as the move was, judges ruled it incomplete because he failed to land on his feet giving him a score of 4,17 and Mick Fanning, three-time world champion took the win, according 9news. Fans were feeling that Kelly Slater deserved a 10.

Brenda Buckley in Surfing Magazine defended the score "It was a beautiful mistake...Surfing will always be subjective and the WSL has subjectively established a system where st like this only belongs in viral videos. And that's the way it should be. The wave was 4"
