DAVID CAMERON CALLS JEREMY CORBYN TO QUIT THE ALBOUR PARTY AFTER THEIR DEFEAT OF BREXIT

The British Prime Minister called Jeremy Corbyn quit the Labour, six days after the victory of "Leave" in the referendum on the Brexit.

The outgoing Prime Minister David Cameron on Wednesday called on the leader of the Labour opposition Jeremy Corbyn leaving him as his duties in the name of "national interest" during a meeting in parliament.-----

"For God Sake". "It is undoubtedly in the interest of my party he was sitting there, but it is not in the national interest. For heaven's sake, man, go!" launched David Cameron, who himself resigned after losing a referendum on keeping his country in the EU. Jeremy Corbyn, leader of the Labour already challenged, must be justified since the referendum that ended with a Brexit, an output of EU countries accused of not having done the campaign to stay in Europe.

UK IS THE FIRST COUNTRY TO VOTE AND WIN TO LEAVE THE EUROPEAN UNION-----

Polling stations close at 10pm tonight, and if you're in the queue by then you'll be able to vote. Find yours - and remember you don't need your polling card to vote, the Prime Minister's blog said before the vote-----
